

For women* at average and moderately increased risk of breast cancer

Who

The Canadian Task Force on Preventive Health Care

- Independent group of primary care and prevention experts
- Internationally respected for their expertise in evaluating evidence

6
Primary care physicians

4
Specialists

2
Nurse practitioners

What

- Develops rigorous, evidence-based preventive health care guidelines for primary care based on impartiality, collaboration and inclusivity

Why

- To improve the health of Canadians by identifying beneficial screening and prevention practices

How

Stakeholder engagement

Expert and peer reviewers

Citizens and clinicians

Health organizations

University of Alberta, University of Ottawa, University of Manitoba, Institute for Health Economics (Edmonton) research team

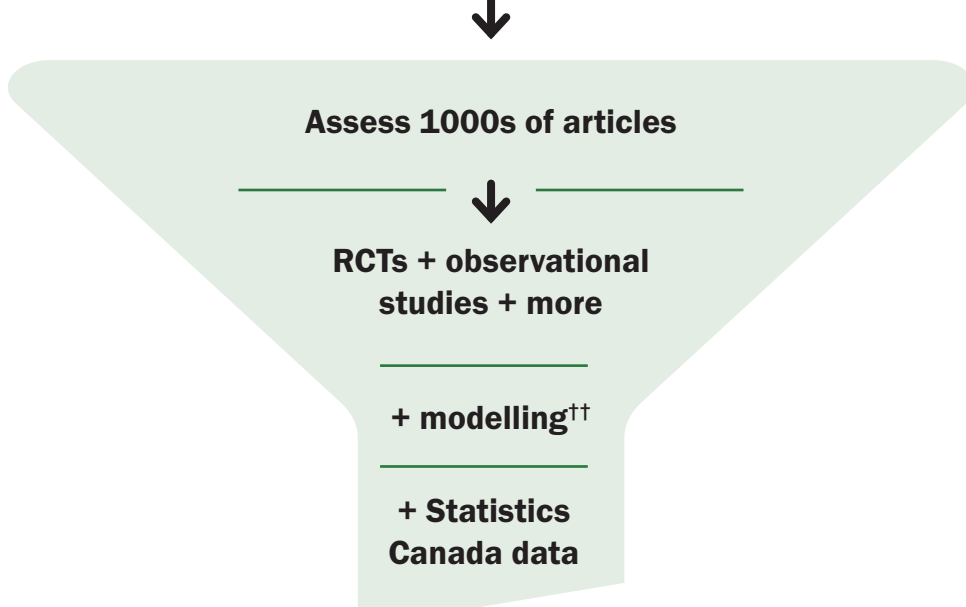

- systematically review and analyze scientific evidence

- provide an evidence summary

Phase 1†

1. Analyze data

2. Assess evidence quality

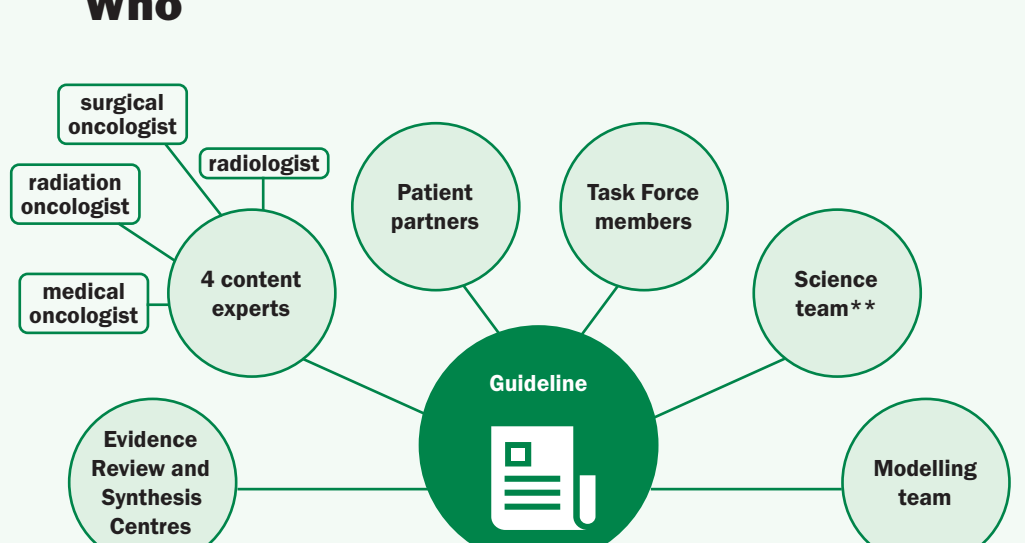

3. Modelling

4. Draft recommendations

Who

Phase 2 – Draft recommendations

Stakeholder and public input

e.g. From cancer agencies, screening programs, cancer experts, public and other groups

Phase 3 – Final guideline

Publication

Patient and clinician tools

†120 people, including 22 experts and representatives from 87 organizations, were asked for their input on the research plan, systematic review, and/or draft guideline. Responses to all comments will be published.

†August 2023 - 19 people and 9 organizations = 145 documents for potential inclusion via online portal

††Commissioned

*People assigned female at birth

Public Health Agency of Canada

The views expressed herein do not necessarily represent the views of the Public Health Agency of Canada.

Find guidelines, tools and resources at www.canadiantaskforce.ca

© 2024 Canadian Task Force on Preventive Health Care